Ohio National Guard to host redesignation ceremony for 371st Sustainment Brigade

WHAT: Headquarters and Special Troops Battalion, 371st Sustainment Brigade will be reorganized and renamed as Headquarters and Special Troops Battalion, 28th Infantry Division Sustainment Brigade.

WHEN: 11 a.m., on Saturday, Aug. 16, 2025.

WHERE: Springfield-Beckley Air National Guard Base, 1120 W. Blee Road, Building 101 (837th Engineer Battalion hangar), Springfield, OH 45502

BACKGROUND: This redesignation is due to recent Army force structure changes.

A division sustainment brigade's primary mission is to integrate and synchronize all sustainment functions for a division in a specific geographical area of operations. This includes managing the flow of logistics (which includes transportation, supply, maintenance, field services, and ammunition support), and providing other critical functions including financial management, human resources and personnel services, health care and medical support, and signal (communication and information technology) support.

The 371st Sustainment Brigade was constituted on Aug. 29, 1917, as the 62nd Field Artillery Brigade. Following World War I, Headquarters Battery, 62nd Field Artillery Brigade was organized in Dayton, Ohio. In addition to serving as a field artillery brigade, the unit has been organized as an antiaircraft artillery and support group. The unit was reorganized as the 371st Sustainment Brigade on Sept. 1, 2007, and has been located in Springfield since 2010.
