

LIFE CHANGES

Your Service in the Guard can too

Many things have changed since you first joined the National Guard. Maybe you graduated college, got married, had kids, changed jobs. Maybe you moved and you no longer live close to your Guard unit. Maybe you want to explore other military careers that your unit doesn't offer. Your ETS is right around the corner - instead of leaving the Guard and all its benefits, make it change to match the life you're living now. To find out how to change your Unit or your MOS, call or text your Brigade Career Counselor today.

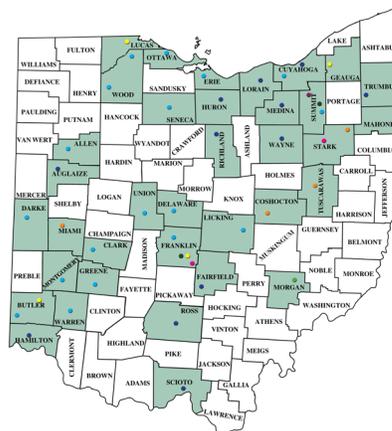

CHANGE YOUR MOS

If you'd like to experience something new and learn additional skills, consider changing your MOS. Successfully reclassing could offer more opportunities for promotion, a transfer to a new unit, and/or certification in new career skills. Talk to your brigade career counselor to see what positions are available or, for general information, visit www.nationalguard.com/careers.

CHANGE YOUR UNIT

Transferring to a new unit could mean shorter drives to drill, new opportunities and different missions. With 107 Army Guard units occupying 44 training sites/areas across the state, a change of location is an option to consider. Contact your brigade career counselor to discuss options that are right for you.
